The Bar Association by a vote of more than two to one has virtually renewed its preference for the Court of Appeals system of judicial relief for the District. The main object, apart from all possible defect of this or that mode of judicial reform, is to obtain from Congress as early as may be some measure by which both the public and the bench and bar will be benefited. The Court of Appeals is preferred by the House judiciary committee, and it is not believed that that committee will adopt any other proposition. A large number of the District lawyers, together with the District Supreme Court, favor an enlargement of the present tribunal. But in face of the danger of losing for a long time, if not indefinitely, the chance of getting anything done, the wisdom of uniting in securing with some modification, perhaps, the bill which can be enacted into law is coming to be generally recognized. Either measure would afford the desired relief in a greater or smaller degree. The general disposition is to accept that which is nearest at hand—that, in a word, which is possible. But it ought to be provided that a majority of the

New York is one of the states agitating for good roads and more of them. A great state like New York cannot afford to be behind in a matter of such importance, and very much may be predicated upon her action. In his annual message of 1891 Gov. Hill made a number of suggestions which, with others, have been embodied in a bill introduced in the state senate by Senator Richardson. As the principles of this measure appear to be of wider than local interest it may be well to state briefly a few of the leading provisions. A board of state road commissioners, composed of two democrats and two republicans, is created, to which the construction and maintenance of state roads outside of cities and incorporated villages are entrusted. This means a non-partisan administrationjust as it should be. The subject matter is public, but not political. The bill further prorides for the submission to the people of a law on the referendum principle authorizing a loan of ten million dollars for defraying the cost of such roads. The manner of spending the money if authorized is directed by the bill. The state engineer determines the kind and character of roads to be constructed and the contracts are awarded by the commissioners to the lowest bidder. The roads contemplated are to connect the county seats of adjacent counties or other points of greater importance and are to run along other lines already existing, so far as practicable. This seems to be for the purpose of affording a number of competing lines of intercourse or because the old lines are A POPULAR BARGAIN IN most favorably situated for communication. A variation of the plan may be desirable in communities less thickly populated or where the wants of communication are more fully to be met by diverging lines. The law provides that any objections made by the inhabitants of a county to the line adopted by the state engineer may be heard by the commissioners and the proceedings reviewed by the supreme court. The acquisition by purchase or condemnation of turnpikes needed for state roads and a change of the penal system permitting the labor of convicts, of paupers and of tramps are all provisions of the proposed measure.

It speaks well for the Memphis press that it | Popular Bargains In PRICE, 35c. condemns the outrageous lynching which took place in that city last week. It would speak better for the community concerned most deeply if a public meeting of indignation and protest against all such proceedings should be held immediately. There are few cities or thickly populated communities in the country, fortunately, where lynch law and other forms of violence are upheld per se by public sentiment, and the excuses offered for irregular revenge in most localities where it is practiced are less and less expressive of the popular opinion. Meantime no community in the land is guiltless which fails to put strongly the seal of its reprobation upon crimes such as those com mitted by the mob at Memphis. This is a land of law, and there is no place anywhere in it for lawlessness.

Congress should not fail to send down to the state legislatures the unobjectionable constitutional amendment providing for the assembling of Congress within two months of its election and the inaugurating of Presidents in the A Popular Bargain In nothing but the oder is lacking. month of April Legislation should be done by men fresh from the people and not, as is sometimes the case, by legislators whom the people have discarded. The 4th of March inauguration has in a hundred years caused more pneumonia, consumption and other diseases, it is safe to say, than perhaps any other public celebration in all our history.

The democratic situation is all a-sizzling, although the nominating convention does not take place until the latter part of June. Meantime state conventions have been called in at least the following states: North Dakota March 24, Minnesota March 31, Indiana April 21, Illinois April 27, Michigan, May 4, North Carolina and Georgia May 18. The democrats have nearly three months in which to apply the bichioride of harmony.

On April 15 another reciprocity arrangement will go into effect, that with Nicaragua. Thus, one by one, the American republics agree to sustain with the United States commercial relations of mutual benefit, and the policy of Mr. Blaine shows no signs of abatement, whatever its enemies may declare.

Mr. Cleveland keeps on "layin' low an' sayin' nothin'," in the plantation language of Brer Popular Bargains In Rabbit, or as one of his New York friends has it, "saying nothing and shooting ducks." This may be better; than either writing silver letters or going south on a circular swing. The forty-five per cent of republican voters in Missouri are entitled to more than one Representative out of fifteen in Congress. Probably the worst case of gerrymander on record is that agreed upon by the Missouri democrats

Washington people who attend the small surreptitious prize fights that are arranged from time to time usually find prompt retribution in the shape of lost sleep, squandered cash and no combat worth speaking of There is nearly always comfort to be found somewhere, even in defeat. While Crisp is wrestling with Reed and the gavel, Mills is quietly but effectively conducting a senatorial campaign in Texas. Up to date Mr. Hill has not replied to Mr.

Harter's inquiry as to his position on the silver estion. This is a case where silence may or may not be silver.

Senator Hill's enemies will doubtless insist that he ought to explain whether the value that gave him so much anxiety contained collars, speeches or an encyclopadia. The Jackson City book-makers propose to evade the law by acting as agents. It is a
